The advisor workspace

- Three panes: client book + navigation (left), the AI advisor (centre), and the open family's profile + live recommendations (right).
- Ask in plain English — the advisor routes your question to specialist agents and answers with citations and open-in-panel links.
- Suggestion chips below the box get you started.

The screenshot displays the SFO Hub AI Assistant interface, which is divided into three main panes:

- Left Pane (SFO Hub): Contains a navigation menu with options like Dashboard, Client book, Pipeline, Pipeline calendar, Coverage matrix, Relationship graph, Service catalogue, Documents, Help & guide, and Sign out. A '+ New conversation' button is also present.
- Center Pane (AI Assistant): Displays a conversation with the AI Assistant. The assistant greets the user and provides information about the Austin Family Office. Below the greeting, there are suggestion chips for 'profile_agent', 'needs_agent', and 'recommend_agent'. The assistant then provides a detailed analysis of the family's services, highlighting gaps in compliance, real-estate administration, and family governance. It also lists recommended next steps, such as JTC Edge Reporting Platform, Real Estate Structuring & Admin, and Family Governance Framework.
- Right Pane (Austin Family Office): Displays the profile of the Austin Family Office, including its name, location, and current services. It also shows a list of recommendations, such as JTC Edge Reporting Platform, Real Estate Structuring & Admin, and Family Governance Framework, each with a brief description and a 'CROSS-SELL' button.

How recommendations are made

- A transparent rule catalogue fires on the profile (services, asset mix, pain points, AUM, stage).
- The cross-sell graph expands the candidate set; an AI layer re-ranks and rewrites each rationale in a relationship-manager voice.
- Every recommendation is traceable to the rule or graph edge behind it.
- All family-office data is synthetic — no real client data is used.
